

THE REAL CAUSE OF SKIN HYPERPIGMENTATION.

In order to effectively combat hyperpigmentation, it is essential to identify the various causes which activate the production of melanin, a substance which sometimes accumulates unevenly in the skin, causing the appearance of dark spots and uneven tone.

The latest medical-scientific advances reveal that irritative processes, which are caused by various factors and not just by solar radiation; damage at cell level and cellular aging cause excessive melanin synthesis and its accumulation in the outermost skin layers.

These discoveries open new ways to treat the melanin production process from the start.

Consequently, depigmenting active ingredients are not only important for effectively treating hyperpigmentation, but also for repairing the cells, protecting them and slowing down the aging process.
